

CHOR BAZAARR

RESTAURANT AND BAR

DRINKS MENU

The Chor of Chor Bazaarr is not a thief.

The restaurant is a twist of an old, eclectic & exotic collector's living room. The thief is a traveller picking up memorabilia from his days in the bazaars of Benaras and Calcutta. He is a reader with musty leather bound books from Egypt and a perfume aficionado with a casket full of musk and jasmine crystal bottles. The walls of his living room have framed Jodhpur durries as art, and one corner has a tattered Pakistani film poster.

His dining table has plates from every hotel of the world, and the coasters are collected as memories of the conversations in the bars of Bombay. Every cushion on the couch is like a postcard from a different city.

When I sit down to dine with him, the starters take me to Chandni chowk and the main course took me to Madras. The dessert was a mishti doi from Dhaka, and the cocktail was an old toddy fix from Goa.

When I got up to leave, I left not just his amusing exotic home, I bid goodbye to all his travels down the roads of HINDSOTAN!
The Chor Bazaarr, is a museum of memories.
