Indian Whisky

Climatic conditions in India play a significant role on single malts that are produced in India. Single malt in India matures much faster, and it is for this reason that we see no age statements; most expressions are only a few years old.

For example, a malt aged for 10 years in North India would be equivalent to a 30-40 year old Scotch.

The spirit in India loses as much as 12% abv per year due to the warmer climate, as opposed to the 2% each year in Scotland.

Indian single malt must be matured for a minimum of three years and a day in oak casks, and it is the product of a single distillery. Indian single malts are a celebration of the finest ingredients offering a radiance of an exotic kind.
