The Story of the....

TRAM

Istanbul, the former capital of Turkey, once had a large tramway network on both the Asian and European sides.

These started as horse trams but gradually changed to electric.

Many routes were built step by step, and the network reached its greatest extent in 1956 with 108 million passengers in 270 cars on 56 lines.

But as happened in most cities around the world, tram service in Istanbul began to close in 1956, and ended completely in 1996.

Trams returned to Istanbul in 1990, with the opening of the Taksim-Tünel Nostalgia Tramway.

The city is divided between Asia and Europe, and while the Asian side has a heritage tram system, the European side has both a heritage tram and a modern tram system.

What we believe at "ISTANBUL" is harmonizing both sides and embracing the culture with our traditional dishes symbolized with the heritage tram of our city..

Every dish has a story, come and experience the Turkish Cuisine;

THE ISTANBUL WAY...
